Porky's wheels

Coverstory

areening around a dirt track at speeds in excess of 60 miles per hour is exciting both to watch and to do — but it can also be very dangerous.

Porky McCabe, 29, Upland, made speedway racing his life for seven years until a tragic accident during the World Qualifying rounds in Sacramento in September 1978 ended his career.

"I broke my back," said the wheelchairbound McCabe simply. "But I was strongminded, I didn't let it get me down. I couldn't race anymore but I love the sport so I stayed involved."

His involvement took the form of sponsoring other racers and opening a business that deals with motorcycles, Precision Performance, in Upland.

Locally, McCabe sponsors Brian Speaks in the Speedway class and three ATC riders who race at Corona.

Motorcycle racing is big in Southern California, McCabe said. "Guys are really willing to spend money and time on their bikes. Most guys get started just playing around and then find they like to race and see what they can do."

The type of racing McCabe did, speedway, is the daredevil part of the sport. "We rode lightweight bikes, with one gear and no brakes, they run on alcohol not gasoline/oil mix," he said. "It used to be nitroglycerine and alcohol but they've outlawed that."

Bruce Penhall, world champ in Speedway racing and former star of the CHiP's TV show, described speedway bikes as the strangest to ride because they violate all the mechanical and technical rules of racing machinery.

McCabe agrees. "It takes a lot of practice to ride speedway because of the way the bikes are set up," he said. "It's scary when you first start out. When you want to stop, you let off the throttle and since the engine is high compression, it comes almost to a stop when you take away the fuel."

McCabe said although he did race in other classes, speedway was always his love. He rode a Czechoslovakian-made bike, a Jawa, while he was competing. "It wasn't because I thought it was the best, it was because that was what I could afford."

Number 154, Raymond Benjamin McCabe, was a familiar sight around ovals in California. He raced regularly at Santa Ana Speedway where his style of "neck or nothing" racing was a crowd pleaser.

Stories about him said the sight of his long ilond hair streaming out from the back of his helmet was the only thing his speedway opponents saw of him when he was racing.

Before the accident that ended his career, he had been seriously hurt before and was sidelined for almost two years before coming back and tackling the race circuit again.

"I knew I could be hurt but racing was important to me — it was my profession," he said

McCabe, who was competing in six races a night, five nights a week, trophied often. "You can win heats all night long but if you don't win the handicap main event, you don't win the trophy," he said.

McCabe made up his mind he wanted to race after seeing the sport. "I told myself, 'I want to do that.' But at first it was just for fun, later it became my profession."

He said although champions are normally younger guys, racers are not confined to any age group.

"We see juniors (8 to 15) and I've raced with guys in their 40s who were into it for the fun of it."

He says the best racers are the little kids, the "hot shoes," because they have no fear at all.

"Parents stick these little guys, five and six years old, on bikes and when they get older they are really the ones to beat," he said.

"It's harder for a guy to really get into racing when he starts late. There's a lot to learn and that is done thorugh competing." McCabe started professionally racing when he was 20 in Class A Speedway and raced for seven years.

How dangerous is speedway racing?
McCabe shrugged, spread his hands and looked down at his paralyzed legs.
"Everything is dangerous — weird accidents happen in every sport. They happen when you're at home.

"My daughter, Roxanne, was hurt on a three-wheel (Honda) a few weeks ago and my mom freaked out. I told her she falls on her roller skates all the time, what are we going to do, take away anything that she might hurt herself on?"

Biggest thing in sales and use right now are the three wheel ATCs, McCabe said. "We sponsor three guys from Upland who race ATCs, Randy Radney, Brian Giles and Mike Grabowski. They race at Corona Raceway mostly."

The ATCs have changed a lot of people's minds about motorcycles. "They made them respectable," he said. "Riding ATCs is something the whole family can do. They make them small enough for little kids.

"I had a doctor come in and buy them for each of his kids and for himself and his wife. People are more than willing to sink money into them — a lot of money," he said.

ATC racing is gaining in popularity too, he said but primarily they are being used for recreation. He has been renting ATCs but says he is considering discontinuing it because people really destroy them.

"A bike can take a lot of punishment but they don't last as long unless they are taken care of, these really get abused." □

McCabe did a lot of his own mechanical work, even when he was racing. Now that he can no longer ride, he's made a business out of the things he learned as a racer and shares the knowledge he picked up along the way with young riders just entering the racing circuit.

Upland parish scales down its dreams

By Terri Tirella

Local members of the Greek Orthodox Church in Upland have purchased a facility on Chaffee Street, but building costs have forced the congregation to scale down an old tradition.

Greek Orthodox churches traditionally build a large cathedral when starting a new parish, according to Harry Panagoita, president of the new church's parish council.

Panagoita said the custom began after someone tried to build a cathedral in Istanbul bigger than one King Solomon built in Israel. "The point being when one goes into the church, they get the impression of being closer to God or a supreme being by being in a large building."

But the Upland church won't necessarily reflect that tradition. "Attempting to build a big cathedral requires big money," Panagoita said.

Architectural changes will be needed to make the building conform to Greek Orthodox requirements. "The altar has a point to one side, it must have an oval, round shape and the roof must be dome-shaped; that's tradition," Panagoita said.

He said those changes will be the parish's next project. Currently, many parishoners are putting in 16 hours a week to renovate the buildings on the property.

The parish was formed because of the distance between the Upland-Rancho Cucamonga area and the nearest Greek Orthodox churches. Orthodox Christians were not attending services or were crossing over to other denominations, according to Panagoita.

"The church in West Covina was supposed to be more centrally located," Panagoita said. But the Upland-Rancho Cucamonga area is about 20 miles from the West Covina parish and the same distance from the San Bernardino church.

A group of about 150 families has been holding services for two years at either the Upland Women's Club or St. Marks Episcopal Church in Upland.

"At that time, we were looking for property to buy in Alta Loma and build what would be an ideal church. But based on our budget, that was not a (viable) alternative," Panagoita said.

When the parish bought its church building and two auxiliary buildings, the house on the property was not included in the price because it was in such poor condition, Panagiota said.

"The house has been renovated ... the city came, inspected and passed the work done," Panagoita said, "We intend to put a family in the house to live."

Panagoita said about 50 percent of the parishioners are of non-Greek origin, either intermarried or converts. Only 10 percent speak only Greek. Services are performed mostly in English with some parts in Greek.

"Serbian, Russians, Lebanese and Armenians are a part of the Orthodoxy," Bill Katzelis, another member, said.

"Greek Orthodox is similar to the Catholic Church with very minor differences ... mostly administrative. The Catholic Church has a pope who is head of their church. We have a patriarch in Istanbul, Turkey. The pope has cardinals; the patriarch has archbishops," Panagiota said.

The newly formed parish hopes to have a full-time parish priest for the community soon.

Panagiota said. "The priest will interface with the people, visit the sick, counsel and do marriage

Most of the money for the parish has come from donations. The organization also holds fundraisers, such as its annual festival Sept. 18. The event, to be held in Taylor Hall of Griswold's Old School House in Claremont, will feature Greek cooking, dancing, music and repertoire dance groups. "We earned $15,000 last year," the parish president said. Other funds come from free-will offerings.

counseling," Panagiota said.

"We haven't picked a church name yet. People can send in a donation with the name of the saint they prefer. The saint with the most money will be the saint the church is named after," he said.

Dancin'

Disabled youths get a chance at gracefulness

By Terri Tirella

A metamorphosis is what local dance instructor Dee Dee Friedman hopes will occur among students in a dance class designed especially for children in wheelchairs.

The class, called "Butterflies," was inspired by a former dancer from Friedman's studio, Fontana 5-year-old Lisa Rubio, who was injured in a car accident last November.

The accident was caused by a drunk driver.

Lisa sustained a spinal cord injury, resulting in paralysis from mid-chest down. She still retains use of her hands and mental faculties.

Friedman said she saw Lisa and her family in a store. "Her sister is about the age to start dance classes. Lisa was telling her sister, "Go on, Jennifer, you'll have a fun time." It was breaking my heart to see someone all of 5 say that."

Friedman compares the children bound to wheelchairs to caterpillars, "slugging around," and she wants to turn them into butterflies.

"They can do ballet arm positions, pantomimes, play musical instruments," Friedman said. "We're going to do a fashion show, perform with flags on stage so these kids don't feel left out."

Friedman said she'll be teaching the class from a wheelchair. "I'm not making a mockery ... if I'm going to teach them how to move around in a wheelchair, by gum, I'm going to learn how too."

She said society doesn't always see handicapped people as human beings. "We put them to death ... or they go to school and get labeled for life. The prime thing I'm teaching is you don't need a label."

Parents will participate in the "Butterflies" class along with the children.

Friedman currently has other children with special needs enrolled at her studio. Some are autistic, others are hyperkinetic or have poor muscle tone. "I work with so many healthy children, teaching every day. I think it would be inhuman after working with so many hundreds of children not to extend myself to other human beings."

In all of her classes, Friedman works on improving her students' confidence and self-image.

"We demand self-respect and respect for others. We teach human beings to have esteem for themselves, teach them how to take care of their bodies, appreciate their minds and appreciate the people around them." She said she tells her students it's a privilege their parents take them to swimming class or dancing classes.

"We emphasize liking themselves. We slip (teaching students) dancing in," Friedman said.

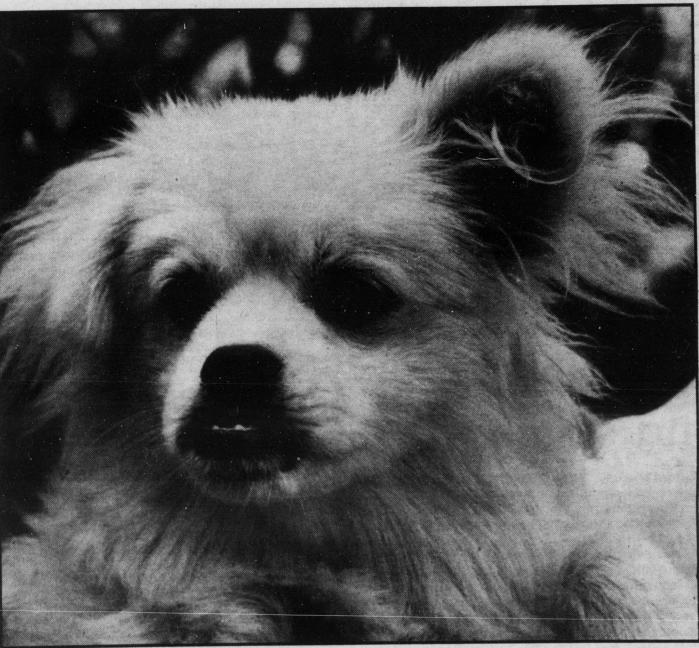

Friedman studied early child development in college and worked as an assistant producer on KCOP's Hobo Kelly show. In addition, "I've taught special needs classes at private schools," she said. She also works with the city's parks and recreation department as a drama coach.

The Rancho Cucamonga resident has been dancing and in dramatics since she was 3 years old. At 19, she began dancing professionally. When she decided to get married, she put her career aside.

In addition to working in her studio, Friedman is coordinating a Muscular Dystrophy walk-athon to be held Labor Day weekend.

She said city officials, local clubs and business leaders are all getting ready for the event, which will include celebrity visits.

Language barrier didn't keep couple from being success

By Matt Coker

Clifford and Socorro Solorzano became Rancho Cucamonga pioneers when they opened a Mexicanstyle restaurant 15 years ago.

There was only on other restaurant in town that served Mexican food, they recall, when they opened Socorro's Cucamonga Mexican Restaurant at Foothill Boulevard just west of Haven Avenue.

The restaurant is named after Socorro because she runs the kitchen operation. While she does not cook every meal, if preparers do not follow her recipe specifies, they often find themselves on the losing team in a shouting match.

"I put my foot down," Socorro said confidently. "They gotta cook my way."

"We get good compliments on our food,"

Clifford boasted. "We kind of get spoiled because when people complain, it hurts our feelings."

The restaurant's motto is "there's more to Mexican food than tacos, beans and rice," Socorro

Besides the typical Mexican entrees, seafood plates, chicken and plain old Anglo breakfasts are served with the Socorro touch.

After her father died, Socorro's uncle brought her and two sisters to the Chino area from Guadalajara, Mexico, to take the strain off her mother, who was left to raise four other children.

Socorro met Clifford, a former San Dimas street sweeper from Pomona, in the summer of 1953 when he came to her door expecting to find someone else.

"The next day he called back and I said 'who is (Continued on page 12)

Real freedom is freedom to give, according to the Rev. C. Robbins Clark, curate of St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Upland.

Those who work with House of Ruth, a home in Los Angeles County for battered women and their children, and other helping agencies do so "because we are conscious of all the good things we have received and need to return."

Clark was ordained by the Episcopal Church in 1981, fulfilling the calling she had felt for many

She studied religion her first years at Mt. Holyoke College, Mass., but changed her major to sociology, receiving her bachelor's degree in 1967.

A summer internship as a hospital social worker convinced her she did not want to be a social

She thought nursing might fulfill her need to give, so she applied to Columbia University's nursing school, receiving her bachelor of science

On a whim, she drove to San Francisco, arriving on Halloween in 1971, and worked at the University of California Medical Center, where she earned a master's degree in nursing in 1974. There, she experienced a spiritual crisis that led her to follow her calling to the ministry.

Clark had stayed away from the church for 10 years. That was her way of coping with the church's unwillingness to accommodate her sense of mission.

Youth jobs available

The Employment Training Agency of the West End is now accepting applications for the 1983 Summer Youth Employment Program.

Each summer the Employment Training Agency (ETA) offers jobs and skill training to economically disadvantaged youth ages 14 to 21 who live in the West End of San Bernardino County. These jobs help young people develop useful work habits and job skills. The youth also earn minimum wage, or up to $134 per week.

Interested youth who live in the Fontana-Rialto-Bloomington area can get information and an application from the Employment Training Agency's office at 308 N. Riverside Ave., Suite H, Riverside, 874-4290. Those living in Upland, Rancho Cucamonga, Ontario, Montclair or Chino should contact the ETA main office at 1129 W. Fourth St., Ontario, 983-0775.

The Employment Training Agency of the West End is a department of the City of Ontario providing assessment, training and job placement to economically disadvantaged West Valley residents.

YMCA offers programs

The West End YMCA is currently launching its annual recruitment drive for members to join the Y's Parent-Child Family programs.

Programs consist of Y-Indian Guides for fathers and sons, Y-Indian Princesses for fathers and daughters, and Y-Indian Maidens for mothers and

Each of these programs are geared towards 6to 9-year-old children with their parent.

Y-Indian Braves is a new program for mothers and sons and will begin this year if there is sufficient interest. The Y also offers Y-Trailblazers for the father and older sons ages 10 to 12.

Each program involves the parent and child in a local "tribe" - a group of six to nine other parents and children.

Tribes meet in members homes and work on various projects and activities. Several campouts and family events are held throughout the year with all tribes participating.

Currently more than 200 families participate in the programs in the West End area. Those interested in joining should contact the West End YMCA, 986-5847.

They were a part of the Big Band era

By Terri Tirella

The Big Band sound from Mel Mears' group is the real thing.

The group's music is no rebirth of a fad. Mears and his musicians, most of them now in their 70s, were a part of the Big Band era.

Mears and his band perform Big Band music for ballroom dancing throughout the area at wedding receptions, parks, senior citizen centers or any festive event.

"If people want music reasonably priced, they call us," Mears said. His band is composed of former professional musicians who changed careers when Big Band popularity died down. Now retired, they're returning to their first love ... making music.

Mears was a Safeway Store manager for 45 years. "I've been retired for eight years and have never been so busy in my life. We play five or six dances a week."

His band is made up of men but women musicians have played for the group from time to time. Mears plays sax. Also featured in the band are guitar, drums and piano.

"Harold Fowler is my best piano player ...

He's my pride and joy, but the only time we get him is when he's not busy (playing professionally). He's the best I found," Mears

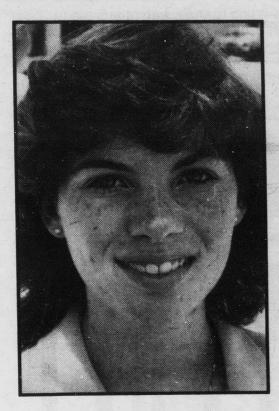

Other band members include Charlie Miller, 72, on guitar, and Larry Coates, 75, on drums. Mears is 71; Fowler is 68.

"We can't find trumpet players; haven't been able to find one for years." Mears said. Trombone players are also difficult to find.

Beginning last January 1, California State law requires all children up to 40 pounds be secured in car seats when riding in automobiles.

To help local parents keep within the law and keep their children safe, the Junior Women's Club of Rancho Cucamonga offers a car seat loan program for a minimal

A community service organization, the club became involved with child safety following a presentation for the group by the County Health Department.

"A woman came to one of our meetings from the county Health Department and expressed the need for a car seat program in the West End," said Kathy Ogden, a club member and former safety director for the group.

"We started the loan program a little over a year ago," Ogden said. "But things didn't really start picking up until a few months ago. When the (car seat) law was

The couple's first attempt — Casa Dinero failed. But making a success at Socorro's has been as easy as tamale pie.

When the restaurant opened at Foothill and Archibald Avenue with only six tables in November 1968, it relied heavily on take-out window traffic.

Serving tacos, burritos, enchiladas, hamburgers and malts, 1,000 customers a day were served when they first opened, Socorro said.

"We were putting so much food out of that little place and we turned tables so many times a day that we were working too hard," Socorro said. "We wanted a bigger place."

While leasing out the other building (which Clifford calls "ours, Uncle Sam's and the Bank of America's"), the Solorzano's took out another loan and built their now 2-year-old restaurant from the ground up.

An open air patio with a Spanish-style tile fountain faces Foothill Boulevard. The banquet room, dining area and lobby were professionally decorated (including about 1,000 assorted baskets hanging from ceiling beams throughout the

Railroads that served the area

Occasionally, someone makes a remark that makes me think there are at least a few readers of this series. One mentioned that some, who are less than old timers, were baffled when mention was made of the P.E. Railway. For their sake, let's talk a bit about railways of the area.

Ontario has two of them. The Southern Pacific Railway crosses Euclid about 750 feet south of Holt Boulevard. The Union Pacific rail crosses about 300 feet farther south. It was formerly the Salt Lake railway. Where they both cross Central Avenue, to the west, there once was a tiny community called Narod. It's part of Montclair now.

Upland's first railroad was the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe. It crosses Euclid at the south side of Upland Lumber Co., carrying Amtrak passenger trains and numerous freight trains. Most local folks simply call it the "Santa Fe." It's Upland depot is on the north side of the tracks, on the east side of Second Avenue and seeminly is no longer used.

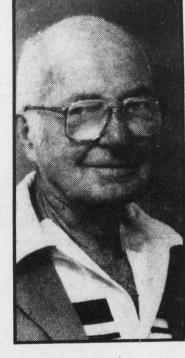

Our present phone book lists the road as Santa Fe Railway, with only a Zenith number. Until the 1950s, Second Avenue did not cross the Santa Fe, but stopped at A Street on the north side, and went on south from Stowell Street on the south side, to end forever at Seventh Street.

Our other important railway was the P.E. It's initials were for the Pacific Electric Railway Co. The mule-drawn cars on Euclid were replaced, in about 1896, by an electric railway. Rather than ending at 24th Street, it curved and went west to a stone masonary building north of 24th Street on Mountain Avenue, in San Antonio Park. It may be seen today.

John H. Nicholson is an Upland resident who here chronicles his family's history in the West Valley.

Glancing Backward

> By John H. Nicholson

Power for this railway, and other local uses, was from the Stone Castle power plant, water powered. While covered by vines, it can be seen where Mountain Avenue curves eastward, just east of Park Boulevard.

When the Pacific Electric came through Upland, headed for San Bernardino, from Los Angeles, they bought out the system on Euclid. The P.E. became, probably the largest electrified intercity line in the country. One could ride over most of Southern California. I believe it's southern most point was in

The big red cars on the main line were fast. I recall my family riding to Grauman's Egyptian Theater, in Hollywood to see such great films as "The King of Kings" and "Ben Hur." Both freight and passenger trains used the tracks, which passed Euclid just north of the now "Woodie's Market."

The freight trains served various industries along the way, curving up to take in citrus packing houses in Alta Loma. The electrified trains used Direct Current, with the Postive current being on the overhead trolley wire. It was connected to the motors by a slanting mast with a grooved pulley on it, which rolled on the trolley wire, up top.

The ground, or negative side of the circuit, was through the rails. No problem, if one touched just one or the other. The story persists, about the elderly lady who got off the Euclid Avenue line one day. She turned and asked the conductor, "Will I be electrocuted if I put my foot on the rail?"

His reply was, "Yes, if you put the other foot on that trolley wire, about 20 feet up there." Conductors took the fares, dinged the bell, to start or stop, and told the motorman what to do. One Euclid conductor had a reputation. If anyone paid the fare in pennies, he, disdainfully, threw them (the pennies) out of the window. Folks with treasure locators might want to check the old Euclid right of way.

Upland had three stations on the P.E. At Euclid, there was a station building, on the east side of the Euclid tracks, just south of the main P.E. line. This was called the "junction" of the main line and Euclid tracks. What is now "Woodie's Market" was the "Junction Store." It sold tickets, mainly for the Euclid lines.

Cars for north or south of the "junction" stopped there and went back. An Upland passenger station was on what is now a vacant lot, on Second (Continued on page 33)

Bank of America combines two escrow departments

Bank of America has consolidated escrow departments from its Ontario Plaza and North Upland offices into the Rancho Cucamonga office at Archibald Avenue and Foothill Boulevard.

The change was made to provide better service to customers, according to Manuel Aquirre, vice president and manager of the Rancho Cucamonga office.

"Basically, we're trying to get escrow activity closer to where we anticipate growth will take place. It appears like it's going to be in Rancho Cucamonga and Ontario," he said.

Aguirre said the escrow department acts as an intermediary between buyers and sellers of properties to see all conditions of the sale are met on both sides on the action.

"They are a disinterested third party to see conditions of the sale are carried out," he

"We had the existing staff; all we did was consolidate at Rancho Cucamonga," Aguirre said. The staff is made up of five women with another planned to join them in 10 days.

"We had to bring in furniture, phones, move our main switchboard, and files," he said. Aguirre said the branch was in the process of making exterior improvements, painting and pavement resurfacing "to dress it up a little."

He said the staff was positive about the move. "It's much better here than at the Northern Upland office. They were very congested there."

"We're talking about further consolidation in the real estate area," Aguirre said. "It might include our realty specialty (department) which is now domiciled at the Northern Upland office."

Mears said playing in a band keeps retired people busy. "If you have a retired man, he has more time (to practice) and it keeps him off the streets.'

Mears said his band plays so much members don't need to rehearse. "We play a lot better because we have more time to practice."

"Your senses are more attuned. We've done it (performed) so many times, it's natural. For every hour we play, we practice an hour," he said. "If I don't practice, everybody knows

"If we can't play well, we don't play." Mears said his group plays for senior citizens in the daytime at bargain prices. "It (the band's fee) depends on how much money they're going to spend. Mostly we play for charity. We play because we want to play."

"All we expect is expense money. If we make our expense money and get lunch, that's all we want," Mears said.

The aches and pains often affecting older people seem to leave Mears' musicians and the people listening to them. "You'd be surprised how fast they forget their aches and pains. A lot of people who come to hear us start dancing," Mears said.

Mears directs the band as well as handling scheduling. The band's next local performance will be for a dance at the Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center, 9791 Arrow Highway, on Aug. 21 from 2 to 5 p.m. \square passed there was a grace period, but after it was over, parents became more aware of the need for car seats."

The club now has 15 Century Loveseat car seats designed for infants up to 20 pounds available for loan and will receive 10 new Century 200 seats for children weighing 20-40 pounds from the county Health Department.

The infant car seats are loaned for a deposit fee of $10 and if returned undamaged, $5 is refunded to the parent. The seats for older children will be loaned for $15 with a $5 refund when returned.

"We keep the money to buy new seats," Ogden said.

Depending on the model, a new car seat might cost from $20 to $60, Ogden said.

With just 25 car seats available, the club hopes to use money raised in the loan program to buy more seats.

"We're getting a slide show together to show other service clubs in the area for their support and possible donations," Ogden said.

People interested in either donating to the program or renting a car seat can call Odgen at her home in Rancho Cucamonga at 985-9468.

In addition to the car seat loan program, the club also held a safety seat belt program for preschoolers during May.

During the club's threeweek program, the group visited local preschools and kindergarten classes showing films and instructing children how to use seat belts.

"The kids really enjoyed it. We gave them safety bug buttons to remind their parents to use seat belts. We're hoping to start a program for older children, too," Ogden said.

Read about Hollywood's greats

By Pat Castaneda

A large part of the achievement of a Hollywood celebrity is his or her ability to survive over a long period of time. When a star's image has been before us on film for years, he or she is an institution, indelibly impressed in our minds and memories, an integral part of our lives. A young celebrity is lacking in stature until he becomes a cornerstone of our culture, a larger-than-life image on whom we can all base our dreams.

The stories of such personalities as Errol Flynn, Bette Davis, Joan Crawford, and many others. reveal the true costs of their achievements. These are stories you won't find in the fan magazines or film versions of the star's lives. But you may find them on the shelves of the library.

Take, for instance, Charles Higham's "Errol Flynn, the Untold Story." This book came out in 1980, and along with much other unsubstantiated material, it claims Flynn was associated with Nazi spies, and may have been one himself! It tells in as much detail as is available of the star's early life, his rise to fame, his women, and most sadly, his drinking and his aging. Flynn led a life in pursuit of pleasure, but the overall effect as presented by Higham is one of frustration and waste.

In contrast, "Jack Benny" by Irving Fein reveals a man with deep roots in his art. Benny's story is totally lacking in drama and conflict, but it has the large heartedness which characterized the man.

The book has all the inside scoop on Benny's penny-pinching image, and on his wife Mary. It is written by a close friend and long-time agent of the was impressed by the thought and work which went into the development of her stage and screen person.

Miss West was a vaudeville star at 18, wrote several of her own plays, and participated in writing some of her films. She came to Hollywood when filmakers were luring Broadway stars west in an effort to find new talent, stars who could speak.

The recent invention of talking pictures combined with the deepening depression had placed many of the studios in financial trouble. This book reveals that West's beauty was more than skin deep.

At the Upland library, and probably most others in the area, these books on Hollywood "celebs" may all be found in one location on the shelf, 791.43 in adult non-fiction.

When you make your selection be sure to take note of who wrote the book, and what his/her relation was to the celebrity. This can make a big difference in the image which is projected by the book.

Higham, a writer who has produced many "celeb" books and bases his work on research and interviews, has a very different kind of a book about Flynn than Fein's "Jack, Benny" or West's autobiography. The essential distinction is how critical is the author in judgments concerning his subject and his material. This question should be asked any time you select a non-fiction book.

Ther are many "show biz" personalities from which to choose, but I notice that most are from well-established, old guard, superstar world. Few are youthful. Perhaps they are the results of the old star system. Since this system, where the entire film industry depended on a relatively few stars, no longer exists, I wonder if today's performers will have an opportunity to achieve the stature of some of these oldies by goodies like Sinatra. Will Tom Selleck be writing his autobiography in 20 or 30 years, and will anyone want to read it?

ENTERTAINMENT DINING GUIDE

Restaurateur's tastes govern his menu

By Matt Coker

"What I'd really like to do..."
Famous last words? Not as far as Jack Anderson is concerned. What he likes is generally what one will find at Regina Farmer Jack's Restaurant at the corner of Foothill Boulevard and Etiwanda Avenue.

The owner of the restaurant for two years, Anderson has taken the business by storm with one simple premise — "if I don't like it, it's not going in my restaurant."

That is the reason the Regina no longer serves Italian food, its trademark for 40 years. Anderson is a meat and potatoes man.

"I noticed from the San Gabriel Valley all the way to here, there aren't really any meat and potato houses. You can go up and down the street and find Mexican, Italian and Chinese food, but you can't find a place that serves meat and potatoes."

Though spaghetti is occasionally served as a special, lasagna, fettuccini and minestrone have taken a backseat to pot roast, chicken-fried steak and mashed potatoes at Farmer Jack's.

Anderson insists his food preference determining the menu "is what has built the business."

The tall, sandy-bearded restaurateur (who is not a farmer) says he has learned a great deal since taking over Regina from Minnie Caseletti two years ago.

"I thought all I would have to do was buy the place and then there would be no trouble getting people to come in here. Boy, was I wrong.

"I made all kinds of mistakes," Anderson recalls, "but the thing is I got real good employees. They were all experienced in this business; I was the only one who wasn't."

But after he dumped about $20,000 into the business in the first five weeks, he took steps to draw customers in and turn a profit. Rule No. 1 was "never cut corners."

Bright lights and a wall that divided the bar from the dining area made the place look too much like a "deli," so the lights were dimmed and an eyecatching, full-length aquarium was installed.

Patrons at the bar, about 80 percent of whom are regulars, enjoy the fish tank, according to Anderson.

Pies, bread and biscuits are all oven-baked on the premises. Boston clam chowder, served on Fridays, is homemade. A well-known chef, brother of the restaurant's manager, added a new beef dish and broiled shrimp in a shell to the menu.

At first, Anderson "took a dive moneywise" because he stayed open too many days. Breakfast is now only served on weekends and dinner is offered only on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

Wednesday and Thursday dinner nights will be added in September. Regina is open every day for lunch.

For about two weeks now, Anderson has also been in the catering business. Regina now delivers sandwiches with fresh, oven-baked bread, lettuce, tomatoes and thick slices of meat to area businesses via a catering truck.

"I thought I would probably lose money, but it's going fabulous. It is because everything is made fresh. If the driver brings back any sandwiches, the lettuce, tomatoes and bread go right out.

"If people say food is good on the catering truck, they are really saying how good the food is at the restaurant," Anderson said.

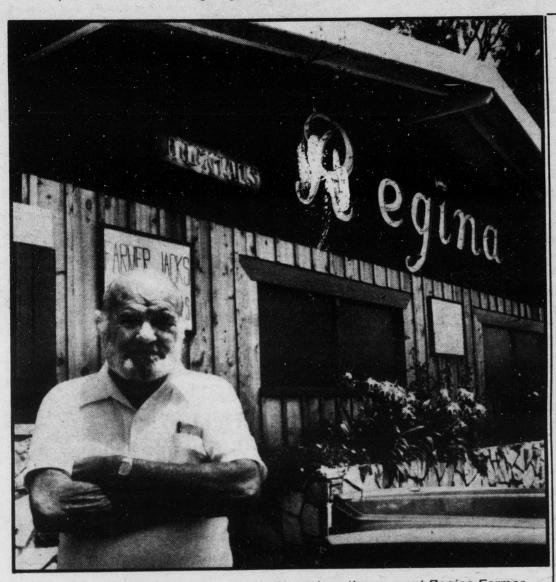

The owner of property throughout the state and a partner in several companies, Anderson retired several years ago after designing plastic pots sold wholesale to nurseries. After playing golf for four years at the Red Hill Country Club, two blocks from his home, he became bored and decided to enter the restaurant business, he says.

Upland council abolishes | CRUISE THE FABULOUS architectural commission

By Joy Sommer

Time ran out for the Upland Architectural Commission this week.

It was abolished Monday in a 3-2 vote by the city council.

Council member Dina Hunter made the motion, citing budget constraints, the fact that 80 percent of the city is already developed and that standards for quality are already set and can be followed by those who will do architechural review in the future.

"It (architectural review) is a costly process, $30,000-$35,000, and it has served a noble purpose. I'm not proposing that the review process be eliminated, just that we look for a more economical way to do it," she said.

Hunter proposed the review process be completed during administrative review. She noted Bill Young, planning director, is a member of the administrative committee and possesses the expertise to do it.

Pleas by Young, former Upland Mayor George Gibson, Planning Commission/ Architectural Commission alternate Joe Ramos and Architectural Committee member Michael Tryon pursuaded only Mayor John McCarthy and Councilman Al Canestro to vote against Hunter's proposal.

"I'm not impressed by what we'd get from a half-hearted process, giving a half-hearted token review. Our needs have been served well and I firmly believe we ought to have a citizen's review group like we have now," Canestro said.

"If we have a problem with the present function, then change it. But if we want a review done, we should have a proper panel of people to do it. If we don't want it, then let's say so," he said.

Tryon, an unpaid volunteer member of the commission for six years, observed that buildings being reviewed by the commission are going to stand 50 years, (Continued on page 33)

$1 million facility opened at Lockheed

Lockheed Aircraft Service Company (LAS) has opened a new million dollar machine and sheet metal shop building and also announced the award of a $1.7 million contract for the construction of a new hangar at its Ontario International Airport headquarters.

"The consolidation of our machine and sheet metal shops in the new 50,000 square foot building, plus the addition of new advanced computer-controlled machines, goes a long way toward improving our capability and productivity," said Ken Neudoerffer, vice president of operations for LAS. "The first big job for the shop will be the manufacture of subassemblies for the new C-5B transport aircraft being built by our sister division, Lockheed-Georgia Company."

The executive said the hangar construction contract, awarded to Berry Construction Co., Upland, includes the demolition of an old hangar built during World War II and laying the foundation for yet another hangar to be built during 1984. The 32,800-square-foot hangar is to be completed by the end of 1983.

Lockheed Aircraft Service Company is the nation's oldest and most experienced aircraft maintenance and modification organization, having processed more than 120,000 aircraft at domestic and overseas locations in the last 45 vears. Its worldwide headquarters have been located in Ontario since 1956.

An Edison Energy Survey Of Your Home Can Save You Energy And Money, Too.

The Wests, Lineaus and Reutters are just three examples of Edison customers who significantly reduced their energy consumption and costs following a free home energy survey of their homes by Southern California Edison energy specialists.

If you're looking for ways to reduce your monthly electric bills, you can arrange a free energy survey of your home today.

All you do is call the toll-free number indicated below or fill in the coupon and send it to us.

We'll call you and set up an appointment at a time that's convenient for you. A trained Edison specialist will visit your home and do a personalized, computerized energy survey which will clearly identify steps you can take to make your home more energy efficient. The survey takes only about an hour.

Many energy conservation methods we recommend cost little or nothing. For instance, Mr. and Mrs. Edward West reported savings by following such simple measures as air-drying dishes in the dishwasher and using their fireplace rather than their heating system.

Of course, other savings were affected by installation of more energy-efficient devices in the home. The Wests installed an evaporative cooler and also weatherstripped and caulked their home. The Lineaus, after their audit, added two desert coolers to their cooling system and reduced their hot weather bills 40%. The Reutters insulated their attic and wrapped their ducts and water heater. They expect a reduction of $170 in their electric bills.

Chances are, a free energy survey will save you energy and money.

This summer, if you choose to install energysaving devices in your home following an Edison survey, you also may be eligible for hundreds of dollars in cash rebates on energy savers listed here. Or you may qualify for low, 8% interest financing with no down payment and up to eight years to repay. Also, you may be eligible for state or federal tax credits on these expenditures.

Square dancing appeals to all ages. To be fluent dancers, couples know an average of 76 calls and be prepared to react to any call combination a caller may give. Dell Morgan (below) keeps dancers in Upland's Track Two Club busy on their feet.

Young or old rich or poor, square dancing has universal appeal, according to Tom Hussey, of Mobile 8's square dancing club.

"From teenagers to people in their 60's, we all seem to mesh," he said.

Square dancing popularity can be seen in the number of clubs and organizations throughout the Upland-Rancho Cucamonga area. Groups include Track 2's in Upland, and Saw Dusters, Swinging Stars, and Mobile 8's in Rancho Cucamonga. Hundreds of dancers from throughout the area attend the Cow County Hoedown which meets four times a year, Arline Hussey said.

Tom and Arline share the presidency for the Alta Loma Mobile 8's, a square dance club which started in a mobile home park in

"We usually have about seven or eight active squares, with about 56 to 65 active dancers. We make visits, take bus trips, and raise money for charities," Tom said.

He said his club holds picnics, pool parties and other social events to keep interest and develop friendships within the club. "That's what square dancing is all about," he said.

Clubs visit each other as a way to make money and more friends, Arline said. "At an official visit, if we have two or more squares, we will collect the host club's banner. For them to get their banner back they have to visit us with two or more squares."

She said most clubs charge $2.50 per person to attend their dances from 7:30 to 11 p.m. "All the clubs have refreshments, some more than others. Where can you go as a couple to dance and eat all night and have a ball for $5?"

While jug of home-brewed cider or moonshine was once a popular refreshment, nowadays drinking is frowned on before a dance

"People are not to come to dances with it (alcohol) on their breath. Not because we're prudes, but because it does affect their coordination when they're dancing," she said.

Every club has its own costume or outfit which they wear for special occasions, like installations, beginning class graduations, and when visiting other clubs.

Each club designs their own badge with their symbol or trade mark and the club member's name. But other badges can be earned for different feats.

"Square dancers who take a bus trip at least 100 miles one way to a dance and come back the same night earn a 'Knot Head' badge," Arline said.

To earn an 'Aqua Nut' badge, people must dance a tip (series of dance moves) in a pool; 'Grasshoppers' earn their titles by dancing in the park on the grass.

Sometimes a club's identity is linked with their caller. DellMorgan is caller for Track 2's and may also call for Mobile 8's next year.

"Some clubs have guest callers each

Callers have different personalities and styles, but timing, rhythm and choreography, or the way they put their steps together is what dancers look for in a good caller.

"Timing is important. If his timing is correct, you can dance to anything," she said.

Most clubs dance to recorded music, anything from country western to pop songs.

Square dance clubs usually hold one or two charity dances during the year. "We usually split the pot (with the charity). "In November, we held a community benefit dance and donated all the proceeds to Lions Club," Arline said. The Arthritis Fund and Casa Colina are other agencies benefiting from square dancing.

Beginning classes are held each year for people interested in learning to square dance.
"There are 68 basic calls. The average number of calls (needed) to be a fluent dancer is 76," Arline said.

Couples are then mainstreamed into the club. Workshops are held to learn more calls of for club members to brush up on club dancing.

"There is no such thing as a perfect dance. Many times you'll break down, but you learn to recover and if you can't recover, you get back into four lines and start again,"

Arline said.

Friedman's classes say the lessons have made a difference in their children's lives.

"Basically I bring my kids (to Friedman's studio) because the kids love her," Debbie Nelson, an Alta Loma resident, said. "My daughter was very withdrawn. She's been a different person and has come out of her shell. She never would participate before and now she's been in two shows."

Upland resident Denise Carson brings her children to the studio because it has helped them with their coordination and confidence.

"I've seen a change in her ... she not only learns dancing but acting, singing and all-around performing," Carson said.

Ontario resident Sharon Payar said Friedman makes her daughter feel good about herself by "letting her be her and letting her go at her own pace in her dancing before moving her on to another class."

GOP women present $100 scholarship

Lori-Ann Pieri, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pieri, of Upland, has been chosen by the Chaffey Community Republican Women, Federated to receive the 1983 annual scholarship award.

The award is granted by the club to a student from the local schools within the area for outstanding grades and leadership qualities. This year's award was $100.

Lori attended St. Josephs School in Upland for eight years and attended St. Lucy's Priory High School in Glendora for four years.

She plans to attend Cal Poly for a year, where she plans to major in liberal arts. She will then attend UCLA to study political science.

She served as secretary of spirit on the ASB executive council and was chosen as senior of the month by her classmates at St. Lucy's.

Babysitters learn about child care

By Lauren Richards

To offset some of the fears of babysitting, by parents and sitters, the Upland police and fire departments through the recreation department is holding safety-proofing classes for prospective babysitters.

Agent Richard Noville of the Upland Police Department, who helps conduct the mini-courses said the 2-year-old program was initiated because of the lack of knowledge young sitters seemed to have concerning child care.

"We found that a lot of young people were babysitting and not knowing what they were doing," Noville said.

The six-hour course concentrates on safety with babysitting and teaches the youngsters to operate babysitting as business.

"We give them forms to fill out when they have a babysitting job. They fill out the parents' names, where they'll be, who to contact in an emergency, picnic lunch in Brea Canyon," Anderson recalls. 'That was a three-hour trip in the '30s. When we went on a trip back then, you didn't say what kind of gas mileage you got, but how many tires you blew out."

Anderson and his wife, Gloria, have nine children from previous marriages.

"Family" describes the working relationship at the restaurant. Minnie Caseletti's daughter is a cook and she also makes homemade salad

In fact, what is now the liquor room was once a bedroom and Minnie lived there five months after Anderson bought the place.

Minnie's sister owns Caseletti's Polka Palace and her uncles once owned Regina Winery. The restaurant retained the "Regina" name (which means "queen") so those who ate at the original food stop would remember it.

The restaurant recently appeared on a television news special series on senior citizens. Regina Farmer Jack's was chosen because it offers a 25 percent discount to seniors any time.

"Nothing is more degrading than saying someone can only eat in your restaurant at a certain time like between 3 and 5 p.m.," Anderson

He patterned his restaurant after a Los Angeles eatery called The Pantry, another meat and potatoes spot. Anderson's cole slaw recipe came from the Pantry.

A recent service is videotaping anniversary, birthday and wedding parties at the restaurant. After filming the affair, Anderson invites the participants back to watch the fun. The yearly parties are added to the tape, which he keeps.

"I just hope they stay married three years so I can at least get three annniversary dinners out of them," Anderson quipped. "What I'd really like to do is get a piano bar ..."

Matchcover convention

The Rathkamp Matchcover Society will hold its 43rd annual national convention Aug. 17 through 20 at Griswold's Inn, Claremont.

Phillumenists, as matchbook collectors call themselves, are expected to gather from various nations, including Canada, England and Australia. More than 600 collections and more than a million covers will be on display. The public is invited to attend

Four auctions will be held — Aug. 17 and 19 at 8 p.m. and Aug. 18 and 20 at 2 p.m.

One of the convention highlights will be the showing of the "Lindbergh Cover," one of the most prized matchcovers in existence. It is from a party at New York's Hotel Astor to celebrate the return of Charles A. Lindbergh from his historic solo trans-Atlantic flight in 1927.

Participants in the convention will compete for trophies and awards in a variety of matchcover persons of all ages. Many are shut-ins and handicapped persons.

Phillumenists (literally "lover of light") include

Matchbook covers are most frequently traded rather than bought, although many collectors will sell if a trade is not available.

While trading by mail is the primary method of acquisition, once a year collector members of the Rathkemp Matchcover Society gather for a weeklong convention. Collectors bring vanloads of covers and set up displays in rooms. A display competition offers prizes and trophies.

Time for football!

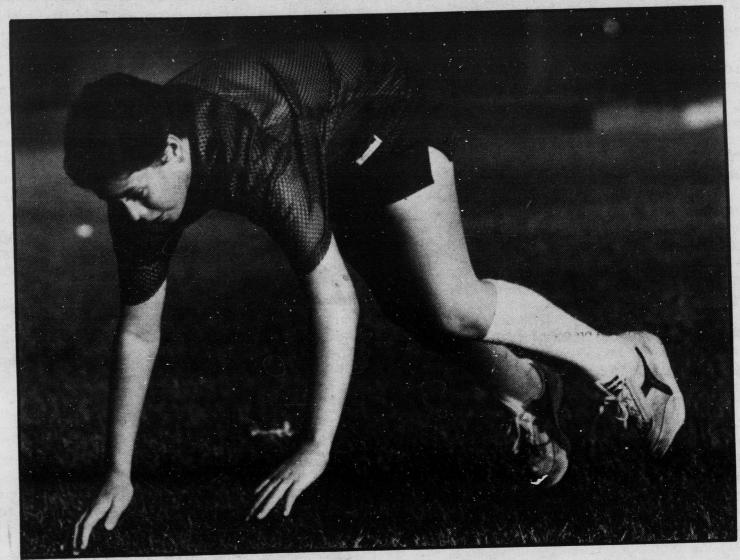

Upland Pop Warner teams are still in need of both players and cheerleaders after the first week of practice.

Players from 8 to 10 years of age weighing 45 to 85 pounds are being sought by the Bandits and Rams, respective mighty mite and junior pee wee squads. Girls aged 7-14 are being recruited to lead cheers.

Upland youngest football teams are practicing daily from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Upland High School. Following another week of conditioning, the players will slip into pads in preparation for the Kickoff Bowl Sept. 4.

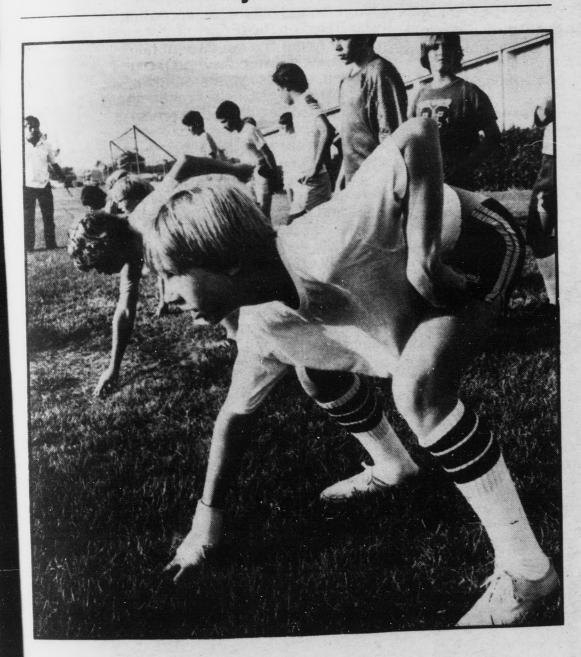

In addition to the Bandits and Rams, other Upland teams include the pee wee Chargers, junior midget Vikings and midget Outlaws, defending Mt. Baldy Conference champions.

Each squad usually carries 35 boys, who are required to carry at least C averages in school. The regular season last about ten weeks and home games are played at Upland High School.

For two weeks, Sean Luebbers will go through conditioning drills.

The first practice session signals a time for conditioning and the dreaded wind sprints. Thirteen-year-old Chase Gardner gets set for the 40-yard sprint against an Outlaws teammate (above). Ingerslev's leg source of athletic fame

By Phillip Barnett

They say when Chris Ingerslev was born 19 years ago, he came out swinging.

All through his life, Ingerslev has drawn attention with his mighty swing and smooth follow through. Some people figure that his graceful swing might even take him a long way one of these days.

Ingerslev's future claim to fame doesn't come in the form of a tennis racket or a baseball bat, but a part of his anatomy.

What impresses people most about the Upland resident is the power and accuracy of his right leg. A leg that he once used to boom a 55-yard field goal in high school, and a leg that was partly responsible for his introduction to Brown University two years

Ingerslev has already established himself as Brown's field goal kicker of the future. He drilled a 45-yard kick and missed one from 56 yards out during his trial with the frosh football team last fall.

Thanks should also be given to Ingerslev's left leg, too. For without it, he wouldn't have been looking forward to a possible starting position on Brown's soccer team this fall.

Ingerslev was discovered by a scout from Brown who came out west to check up on Chaffey High School's Cle Kooiman, who happens to be a good friend of Ingerslev's. After Kooiman and the scout talked, Kooiman told him about Ingersiev, who was attending Montclair High School at the time.

After a four-day visit to the Ivy League school, Ingerslev was so impressed he decided to sign up. In doing so, he nixed offers from both the University of California at Berkeley and at Davis, Claremont-Harvey Mudd, and the University of Colorado.

"I chose Brown because it's ranked number one academically in undergraduate studies," says Ingerslev, a computer science major. "Also, it's not large, with just 5,000 students. And I get to go east and see how the other coast lives."

So far, Ingerslev's experience on the far side of the country has been a good one.

"Everyone there is friendly. There is a good relationship between the faculty and students. When I visited Brown for four days, I left with a good impression," says Ingerslev.

Back in Upland for summer vacation, Ingerslev picked up employment at a marketing research firm in Los Angeles and spends his off days preparing for the upcoming soccer and football seasons.

With the prospects of splitting time on the gridiron and the soccer field, along with the usual load of heavy duty homework, Ingerslev foresees a very busy fall semester.

"I have to budget my time as best I can and try not to waste too many minutes," explains Ingerslev, who knows it's going to be tough from his previous experience of last fall.

"Occasionally I have to bring books along on road trips," Ingerslev admits. "But I still have fun. I need that, I'm not too restricted."

Ingerslev began playing soccer in a AYSO league in Pasadena when he was six. Later he joined Upland Astros in the Pacific Soccer League.

Chris Ingerslev

While in high school, Ingerslev captained the soccer team three straight years and was an All-Hacienda League selection each campaign.

As a fullback in soccer, Ingerslev's forte is defense. But during his first year back east, Ingerslev described his season as frustrating.

"The change in climate kept me sick for a while. Then after I got well, I pulled a groin muscle. It was a humbling year for me," states Ingerslev.

But Ingerslev's play prospered during the indoor season. And after enjoying a good spring, he thinks he'll earn a starting position next year.

Next season should prove an interesting one for Ingerslev and the Brown soccer team. It was ranked fifth in New England and lost a 1-0 game to the University of Connecticut, which went on to compete in the national semi-finals last year.

Once Ingerslev runs out of eligibility and earns his degree, he plans to go on to graduate school, maybe leaving soccer and football behind.

"Making the big leagues has always been a dream. But realistically, I don't think I could make it," says Ingerslev. "If the chance comes up, I won't turn it down. The same goes for football."

How to arrive at a happy medium.

It's easy with our Level Pay Plan.

If you've been going through the ups and downs of paying your monthly gas bills we have a way to help balance things out. With our optional Level Pay Plan.

It'll spread the costs of your higher winter gas bills over the entire year. So you face approximately the same size gas bill every month. Summer and winter.

Here's how it works: we'll estimate your total gas bill for the upcoming year based on the history of gas used in your home and our current rates.

Up

Then we'll divide the amount by twelve to establish your monthly Level Pay Plan amount. On the twelfth month your bill will be adjusted to reflect any underpayment or overpayment based on your total actual gas usage compared to your estimated usage.

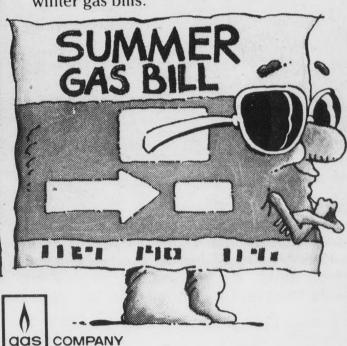

Throughout the year we'll continue to read your meter and review your bills. And your Level Pay Plan amount will be adjusted whenever your average usage decreases or increases substantially or the month following any rate change. That will help keep the final month's adjustment to a minimum.

To participate in the Level Pay Plan just pay the Level Pay Plan amount on your August gas bill. And if you decide to drop the plan at any time, simply notify us. It doesn't cost you a thing.

For more information call your local Gas Company office.

You'll like the convenience of our Level Pay Plan. And you'll find it's an easy way to get even with your high winter gas bills.

While the varsity level gives players a chance to keep in top form for the coming prep season, the JV league is more than just a place for conditioning.

According to Jeff McCall, league organizer and former head basketball coach at Alta Loma (now the new Chaffey College coach), it's a league created from necessity for a large group of younger players.

"It gives some of the younger kids a chance to play under a controlled and orgainized situation," said McCall. "Our varsity summer league has been very successful the last 4-5 years, and we saw the need was there for some of the younger kids.

"The idea is to give kids coming up in the program a chance to improve their skills and stay

Gainers post win

Teamwork helped the Upland Gainers Class III gymnastics team as they defeated the visiting Fontana Aerials, 163.8-160.3.

Fontana's Tanya Lowder placed first in the all-around with a 33.9, followed closely by Upland's Michele Brown at 33.8.

Brown finished first in the floor exercise, second in the uneven bars and third in both vault and beam to earn the second place all-around honors. Another strong performance for the Gainers came from Monica Flores, who finished fourth in allaround (32.7) with a second place floor performance, third place vault and fourth place honors on the beam. Susan Caldwell was fifth in all-around (32.1), placing third in floor exercise, fourth in vault and sixth on the beam.

Upland trio named All-Stars

Three Upland players were named to the American Legion District 25 Division I All-Star squad. Chris Wax (pitcher-first base), Danny Kasten (pitcher) and Mike White (pitcher) earned All-Star status.

Memorial Park will be the site of the Area 5 Tournament.

Opening round contests pit District 25 runner-up Rancho Cucamonga (33-13-1) against District 22 champ Clairemont (San Diego) at 5 p.m., followed by an 8 p.m. battle between District 25 champion Ontario (22-8-1) against District 29 champion Fullerton Dodgers.

Handicapped learn to ride horses walk or see are learning to ride horses in a new valley program for the severely physically handicapped.

Several of these riders will participate in a standard horse show Sunday. They have already been in an allhandicapped rider show.

Pat Morris of Rancho Cucamonga, who has long been involved in training and showing horses, started the program last year. Her son, Ray is a professional trainer.

"While I was visiting Hawaii, I learned about a program for the handicapped and decided to get involved," she explained.

"People confined to wheelchairs are restricted and dependent. But up on top of a horse they experience freedom and independence.

"The horse provides them with eyes and legs and a mobility not otherwise available. In addition, there is the sense of accomplishment, the opportunity to compete and the chance to develop skills in an activity shared by normal people."

Riders usually visit Mrs. Morris' stable once or twice a week to ride her three horses. Several are capable of riding on a high-spirited jumper named Bo. But most enjoy riding Bonnie, a patient quarterhorse who seems to sense the special needs of her riders. Youngsters can ride a pony.

Ann Johnson, a therapist at Casa Colina Hospital in Pomona, brings clients from the hospital's adult day care program to the ranch once or twice a week.

"We have people in their 40s who Youngsters and adults who can't have never been on a horse," said Johnson. "After they get over their apprehension they look forward to riding."

Two others who ride regularly have shown great progress. Morris identified them as Mikko Mayeda of Upland and Philip Marshall of San Bernardino.

Both participated recently in the first all-handicapped horse show in West Covina. Both won awards.

Mayeda, 22, has multiple sclerosis and is confined to a wheelchair. She also has very limited vision.

She handles high-spirited Bo like a veteran after just a few months. Mayeda now rides the horse at a trot. When she becomes more skilled, Morris said, Mayeda will be able to handle a cantering horse and participate in standard horse show competi-

"I'd ride every day if I could," said Mayeda. The young woman has blossomed and become much more animated since she started riding, Morris reported.

Shirley Marshall of San Bernardino said the change in her son, Philip, is just short of a miracle.

Marshall, 21, suffered severe head injuries when shot 21/2 years ago. He is blind and paralyzed.

"He used to just lie in bed or slump in his wheelchair and listen to his radio," his mother noted. "Although he resisted any attempt to ride at first, he now looks forward to his weekly

"Most important, Philip rests better. eats better and is more relaxed. He won't admit it, but he's really having a good time."

As an indication of his new spirit of cooperation, the young man managed a partial smile when told that a photographer was going to take his picture. "Look at that, he grinned," shouted his mother.

Morris and others interested in the program are seeking to incorporate Therapeutic Equestrians as a nonprofit organization.

"We need to be non-profit since so many people are coming forward to offer their help in the program," Morris explained.

Maintaining horses and conducting shows is expensive. But the group's first horse show in West Covina did manage to break even. But other shows and training programs are already planned for the future.

The program is more complex than just putting someone on a horse. Trained personnel must assist in helping the handicapped from their wheelchairs to the horse's back. Qualified guides must accompany the horse and rider until the rider is able to manage the horse. This may continue for weeks.

CC

Ramps are required since riders usually can't hoist themselves onto the horse. "We are extremely careful so that falls and accidents are avoided," Morris explained.

Mayeda has progressed to the point where she can mount with minimum assistance. When Bo stumbled recently, she stayed mounted and quickly pulled up the horse's head, as any expert rider would.

Another local rider in the program is Ewen McIntyre of Claremont. She is not confined to a wheelchair.

"Ewen won a ribbon in the recent horse show and still hasn't come down from Cloud 8," claimed Morris. "Ewen comes to ride after he gets out of school."

Aluminum can, scrap prices hiked

Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company has announced an increase in the price it pays for scrap aluminum and aluminum castings at its Rancho Cucamonga location, 9910 Sixth St. Reynolds now pays 30 cents per pound for aluminim cans in Rancho Cucamonga, and has raised the price to 25 cents per pound for aluminum scrap and castings.

"Our raise in prices for all aluminum is Reynolds' way of encouraging consumers to recycle not only luminum cans, but also other aluminum items including siding, gutters, storm door and window frames, and lawn furniture tubing. These items should be free of non-aluminum parts, and cut to lengths not exceeding three feet," Greg Crawford, Reynolds complex manager, said.

"Aluminum recycling has always been a beneficial means of cleaning up the environment, while conserving energy. With summer now here, recycling also provides a convenient means of earning extra vacation money," he said.

The recycling center is open Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. For information, call 980-1203 or (800) 228-2525.

Five Uplanders attend sister city conference

Upland sent five representatives of the Town Affiliation Association (Sister City) to the 23rd Annual Conference of Sister Cities International in Phoenix

Representing Upland and its sister cities of H. Caborca, Mexico and Mildura, Australia were president Zella Stone, vice president Dean Love, treasurer Margaret Kritzman and directors Carol Melzark and Marjorie Richardson.

More than 400 representatives, about 1/4 of those belonged to the National Youth Program of Sister Cities, participated in the conference

Out of a total of 1,094 affiliations, California has 295. During the years Upland has participated in official visits as well as many individual and group visits with its sister cities.

Sister Cities International came about as a result of President Eisenhower's People to People Project, enlarging it to include cities. The goal is "Peace Through Understanding" between people on a personal basis.

Anyone wishing information about the group can contact Stone, 982-1369.

July 26

Possible stroke — in the 1000 block of Springfield Street. It was originally reported as a possibly insane person, but was found to be an elderly man who was very uncooperative. He was taken to the hospital.

Vehicle fire — A car's passenger compartment was totally in flames, and was extinguished with a booster line. The fire caused $1,800 damage. No one was injured, and the cause is not known.

Illegal spray painting — in a garage in the 1200 block of West 11th Street. A man was contacted and said he knew it was illegal and would continue to paint anyway. The case was refered to the fire prevention bureau.

Fight — at Arrow Highway and Mountain Avenue. Two people were treated. The first, a 24year-old man, had a cut on his cheek and over his eye, and was bandaged and left. The second, a 22year-old man, had a cut nose but refused medical treatment, and was left in the care of the polie department.

Unresponsive person — in the 900 block of East Foothill Boulevard. A 69-year-old woman was found on the floor by her husband when he woke up in the morning. She was given oxygen and taken to the hospital.

July 27

Traffic accident - at Foothill Boulevard and Second Street. A 69-year-old woman and a 29-yearold man both complained of neck, back and knee injuries. Both were taken to the hospital by ambulance.

Car accident — in the 1000 block of Harrison Court. A car had rolled back, pinning a man's leg between the car door jam and a wall. The extent of his injuries was undetermined because he refused medical aid.

Possible heart attack — in the 200 block of Garnet Way. A 49-year-old woman was taken to the hospital by ambulance.

Possible heart attack — in the 1300 block of San Bernardino Road. An 83-year-old woman was given oxygen and taken to the hospital by ambulance.

Grass fire — in a lemon grove in the 1300 block of Erin Avenue. Apparently arson, but only 10 feet by 35 feet of grass burned.

Roof fire — in the apartment complex in the 600 block of Diamond Court. Apparently started by the use of illegal fireworks. Damage was estimated at $250.

Grass fire - at 13th Street and Campus Avenue. Possibly arson. About 3,000 gallons of water were used to extinguish the fire.

July 28

Poss. - Dath - in the 200 block of North 10th Avenue. A man was unable to rouse his grandfather. Firefighters broke in, but found that the grandfather had been sleeping with the radio and fan on and hadn't heard his grandson knocking.

Vehicle fire — in the 1300 block of Fifth Avenue. Someone used a flammable liquid to set fire to a late model compact pickup. Damage was estimated at $4,000. No one was injured.

Gasoline in eyes — in the 700 block of North Mountain Avenue. A 66-year-old man got gasoline in his eyes, and firefighters washed it out with saline solution and advised him to see a doctor.

Seminar eyes woman alcoholic

"Special Problems of the Woman Alcoholic" will be the topic of a free seminar, open to interested members of the community, scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 6 from 9-11 a.m. in Pomona Valley Community Hospital's Pitzer Auditorium.

Muriel Zink, director of the Amethyst program at College Hospital in Cerritos, will be the featured speaker.

According to the California Women's Commission on Alcoholism, there are four million women alcoholics in the United States, comprising 35-50 percent of the alcoholic population.

Currently, however, only 18 percent of those seeking treatment are women. The upcoming seminar will reveal some of the reasons for this disparity, the physical and psychosocial factors affecting the woman alcoholic, and what forms of help are available.

The presentation is one of a series of "Alcohol Awareness Hour" programs being offered as a community educational service by Pomona Valley Community Hospital's Alcoholism Treatment Service and the National Council on Alcoholism of East San Gabriel and Pomona Valleys, Inc.

Held on the first Saturday of each month at Pomona Valley Community Hospital, the programs are open to anyone interested in knowing more about alcoholism or chemical dependency and are offered free of charge.

For information, contact the NCA San Gabriel office at (213) 331-5316, the Pomona office at 629-4089 or the Pomona Valley Community Hospital Alcoholism Treatment Service at 623-8715, extension 1201.

Babysitters learn about child care

so everything will be there for them," Noville said.

In addition to teaching home safety, the course also teaches youngsters how to babysit handicapped children.

"One of the most important things the kids are taught is that handicapped children are more normal than different," said Joanne Travers, a coordinator for United Cerebral Palsy who helps teach the class.

"I get a lot of kids from the classes who want to sit for handicapped children after they've been in the program," Travers said.

Travers also refers parents to area teens she knows have taken the city's course, though Noville said neither the police nor fire departments have such a referral program.

After completing the class, the students receive a "basic child care provider" certificate from the city, Noville said.

Michelle Lester, 12, one of the most recent "graduates" of the program, wanted to babysit and took the course at her mother's insistance.

"I learned a lot. There were a lot of things I didn't know about and I hadn't thought of," Michelle said.

With her certificate of completion from the class, Michelle now hopes to begin babysitting in her Upland neighborhood.

The next babysitting classes will be held Aug. 25-26 through the Upland Recreation Department. There is a $5 fee for the class. \square

Upland Planning Commission turned down a request by McDonald's to allow the construction of a playland at the restaurant on Foothill Boulevard, east of Euclid Avenue.

Planners said the playland didn't fit in with the area and a traffic hazard could be created. The 9foot statue of Ronald McDonald that the company was also proposing also presented a problem because it was in violation of the sign ordinance.

The Upland Firefighter Paramedic Committee, supporters of Measure M during the November ballot, recently made a donation to the city of $106.54 in surplus funds.

The money was designated for use on specialized equipment for life-saving purposes for Upland citizens.

Upland Fire Department's 1967 Ford pumper has "finally died" according to the staff newsletter.

The pumper, used as a reserve engine when one of the others is down for repairs, is getting new life, in the form of a new engine compliments of General Services.

Upland Library's first annual Dress Your Pet Show was a rousing success.

According to library sources, 18 live and 25 stuffed pets showed up with owners in tow. Among the costumes were Los Angeles Dodger fan, Hawaiian vacationer and a Supermen stuffed raccoon.

"Not one dog or cat fight was recorded and cleanup proved to be a breeze," the spokeman said.

Steven Bartosik and John Mogan are the newest members of the Upland Police Department.

Bartosik had been working as an ambulance driver and attendant and Mogan was formerly employed as a diesel train mechanic.

Both men have completed law enforcement training academies at their own expense. They went on the job Monday.

She found a new position with San Francisco's Veterans Hospital in open heart surgery and eventually headed its dialysis unit.

In the summer of 1976, the church changed its canon to allow the ordination of women. At Christmas, a friend asked if she'd ever thought of entering the priesthood.

"I've been thinking about it all my life," she said. "Why do you ask?"

"If that's what you want to do, why aren't you doing it?" the friend responded.

The following summer, Clark asked for part-time work and entered the seminary at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific in Berkeley.

Clark's first application for approval was denied when she was two months into her academic work.

"That was scary," she said. "I'd given up a good job and I didn't know if I'd ever be accepted." Still, she continued her studies and took an internship as a hospital chaplain.

When her second application was accepted, she was ahead of herself. Preferring to complete her degree and get her ordination at the same time, she decided to participate in an exchange program with a seminary associated with Oxford University in England. She was the first woman to attend.

Returning to Berkeley a year later with an Oxford certificate in theology, she completed her master of divinity degree in June 1981 and was ordained the following July.

That spring the governing board at St. Mark's in Upland had decided that at least one woman should be interviewed for the curate position that had just opened.

She was offered the curate's position after her interview in April 1981 and she moved to Upland following her ordination.

Flying Wing may rise again in

The futuristic Flying Wing, curiously scrapped by the Air Force in 1953 after a decade of impressive tests, could be taking off once again.

A squadron of volunteer aviation workers, including some who worked on the original Flying Wing project, is restoring a version of the boomerangshaped craft at Chino Airport. They plan to fly the 40-year-old plane within redevelopment of the bold design for large cargo craft. It commissioned a study a few years ago by the three largest aircraft builders that showed that such designs, up to twice as large as the Boeing 747, would be more efficient than other large cargo carriers.

Early in World War II, when the Pentagon asked aircraft designers to provide the ultimate bomber, aeronautical visionary Jack Northrop was ready with an "all wing" concept he first developed in 1929.

Although radical, even by today's standards, the design was approved for testing and a series of prototypes were built through the 1940s, ranging from a small twin-prop model to the huge jet-powered YB-49 version.

Mechanical problems plagued the prop models, but when jet engines were installed, the Flying Wing soared flawlessly with one tragic exception.

On June 5, 1948, a YB-49 crashed for unknown reasons, killing the five crewmen, including Capt. Glen Edwards, the test pilot for whom Edwards Air Force Base is named. It was the only crash in the Flying Wing's 10-year test program.

In 1951, a YB-49 flew cross-country in a record four hours and 20 minutes, averaging 511 mph. At the end of that flight, President Harry S. Truman toured the YB-49 and was overheard saying, "This looks like one hell of an airplane. I think we ought to have some."

But soon after Dwight D.
Eisenhower became president, the Air Force gave its large bomber contract to Convair's six-engine B-36. And the Pentagon inexplicably ordered workmen with acetylene torches to cut remaining versions of the Flying Wing into tiny pieces to be sold as Northrop, who died in 1981, said in an interview shortly before his death that the Department of Defense killed the Flying Wing development project when Northrop would not agree to merge his company with Convair. The Air Force maintained the B-36 was simply a better aircraft.

"Anyone whoever saw the wing fly, never forgot it," said 71-year-old Max Stanley, a Northrop test pilot for 27 years. "It's absolutely inconceivable that someone would order them destroyed...The airplane of tomorrow was flying 35 years ago."

Just two Flying Wings survived the government torches — a pair of smaller N9M prop versions with 60-foot wingspans. One is displayed at the Air and Space Museum in Washington. The other was kept under a tarpaulin for 30 years at Chino Airport, about 50 miles east of Los Angeles.

That plane, its wooden-strut wings rotted and its metal center section rusted, is now being restored by about a dozen volunteers at the Planes of Fame Museum at Chino Airport. The museum hopes to be flying the Wing to airshows around the country in a year or two.

"We're rebuilding the N9MB as a tribute to John Northrop," says Ed Maloney, director of Planes of Fame. "Pilots who flew it said it was one of the best planes they had ever flown.

"The government was conserving metals during World War II, and only the center section of the first flying wings were made of steel," says Maloney. The volunteers have removed four decades of rust from the center-section, which looks like a bent automobile frame with three bathtub-sized openings for the cockpit and twin engines.

Meanwhile, NASA has expressed an interest in possible future redevelopment of a "span loaded" aircraft, another term for an all-wing design.

In 1979 Northrop talked with NASA officials about his design, and soon after received a letter from NASA chief Robert A. Frosch.

"We sometimes lose track of historical lessons," Frosch said in the letter. "Our studies of technical requirements of potential large cargo logistical aircraft have led us to consideration of span-loaded configurations, during which we have rediscovered the Flying Wing.

"Wind tunnel data and analysis confirmed your much earlier conviction, as to load-carrying and efficiency advantages of this design ... and studies prepared for us by the manufacturers of large airplanes have further corroborated those findings," Frosch added.

Boeing, McDonnell-Douglas and Lockheed each did further studies of "span loaded" large cargo planes under NASA contracts a few years ago. An aeronautics engineer for NASA at Langley Air Force Base, Matt Winston, said the studies agreed that all-wing designs would be "a more efficient flying machine" at weights up to 2 million pounds and wingspans to 500 feet.

Drawbacks that were cited, he said, included engine noise of such large planes and the need for extra-wide runways. Winston said he knew of no all-wing designs now being built or in the planning stage by the major aircraft builders.

But a Northrop Aircraft spokesman and aviation historian, Ira Chart, says he has little doubt Jack Northrop's aviation dream will be resurrected in the next 15 years as a cheaper, more efficient alternative for airborne transportation.
